Motivation letter

Writing a motivation letter requires preparation. You will need not only to work on arguments in your favor, but also to learn as much as possible about the University you want to go to. So you will find something to "catch" in the argument of his choice of this University.

Personalize as much as possible

If in your motivation letter it is possible to change the name of the candidate or the name of the University without prejudice to the meaning – this is a bad cover letter. Use the information gathered during the preparation and find something common in your experience and interests with this University.

Observe the structure and write less

Your motivation letter also speaks eloquently about analytical skills and the ability to succinctly and on the topic to present an idea. The international Department of the University usually does not have time to read the whole manuals about your irresistible desire to go on the program. One or two pages is more than enough.

There is no need to start each new argument with "first" or do paragraph numbering. The main thing is to make sure that an outsider sees in the letter the sequence and semantic connections that step by step will convince you that you are the one who they need.

Cover different aspects of your personality and work

Here your University merits are important and phrases like "I am in the top 3 students of my course" will fit. But it is also a cultural project for interesting and active individuals.

Moreover, some merits and skills are not obvious. For example, you can talk about working in a team on many University projects. Say it made you a team player and gave you a basic understanding of project management if you were in charge.

Convince of your usefulness

First of all, the diligence and your knowledge that you will share with other participants.

Explain how you plan to use the experience when you return home. Above all, it must be in the spirit of the core values of the programme. Here we can talk about the desire in the future to work in the public sector, in the field of international cooperation or education, for which you need this experience.

No negative

Confident and tireless work, no matter what, raises you in the eyes of the reader. Try to be always positive and remember that you always can use our custom research paper writing service.
